Wait, what's happening? Empire Times (or ET as we like to call it) is the student publication of Flinders University. It is currently in its 40th year of publication. Empire Times prints 10 issues a year, over the academic year. Empire Times has three student editors. Currently there are two editors in place and we need a third - that's where you come in.

Want to be in charge of a magazine? Have you seen The Devil Wears Prada? It's a lot like that except no one goes to France, Meryl Streep isn't here and everyone's much nicer.

Do you consider yourself a jack of all trades? If not we can train you to be, you just need to be willing to learn about print, web, social media and graphic design.

KEY RESPONSIBILITIES:

As an editor of Empire Times you are required to:

Collaborate with your co-editors to create 10 issues of Empire Times during your tenure. This must be done in accordance to the production schedule developed in conjunction with editors and the Media Officer of FUSA.

To exercise authority over all aspects of the magazine's production, design, photography, editing and writing.

Endeavour to increase the prominence of the publication within the general student body and wider community.

Co-ordinate and support a diverse range of contributors, writers, photographers, illustrators, sub-editors, proof readers etcetera.

Liaise with the Flinders University Student Association Student Council and staff and consistently attend any necessary meetings.

Please note:

An editor of Empire Times works an average of 20 to 25 hours a week on the content of each issue; content, design, layout and publishing. It is not obligatory that you have experience in publishing and design programs as you will be trained. Applicants must be a student of Flinders University. Potential applicants will be required to sit an interview by the end of December.
